	Benefits of Travel
INTRODUCTORY PARAGRAPH Thesis Statement	One of the greatest philosophers, Augustine said, "The world is a book and those who do not travel read only one page." It is a well-known fact that experiences of travel can provide a person a lot of benefits. Not only the traveller, but also an entire country benefit from travel or tourism activities. Obviously, travelling has benefits for the people who travel and for the country's economy.
BODY PARAGRAPH 1 Topic sentence Support 1 Support 2 Concluding Sentence	The first gain of travelling is personal benefits. To begin with, traveling broadens the traveller's horizons. Seeing different places either in their own country or in another country will give travellers a chance to see different lifestyles and different kinds of people. They can realize that there are alternative ways of doing everyday activities such as housing, cooking and practicing religion. As a result, they become more tolerant and wiser with different perspectives in their own life and work. Furthermore, travelling teaches people many skills. Maybe the skills that are most dramatically affected are social and organizational skills. Travellers have to plan their travels carefully and follow these plans, which will make them better organizers. Also, travellers have to talk to, or even stay with many other people during their time away from home. This will also help them become better communicators. In brief, if people want to improve themselves, travelling is definitely the best option for them.
BODY PARAGRAPH 2 Topic sentence Support 1 Support 2 Concluding Sentence	Another gain of travelling is that it benefits a country's economy. To start with, travelling creates a lot of opportunities. Travelling requires many workers in tourism agencies, transportation, accommodation, catering, and a lot of other job areas that depend on visitors. When people travel, they have to spend money to meet at least their basic needs. As a result, this will create more job opportunities in the places which are attractive for tourists. Additionally, people who travel will get new ideas for business wherever they go because they see new businesses and communicate with people who are in different industries. This will give people a chance to build a network for their work. For example, a businessman who travels on a train can meet somebody who does the same business as they do and they can network. As a result, travelling can improve a country's economy.
CONCLUDING PARAGRAPH Paraphrase of thesis statement	In conclusion, travel is useful for both people and businesses. Domestic and international travel will give rise to people who are more equipped and qualified and also economies can improve and become stronger. I think, in addition to being fun, travel is important especially in the globalized world.
