

CONCLUSION

The conclusion mainly restates the thesis statement to remind that you agreed/disagreed with a specific idea, summarizes the main points you discussed in body paragraphs, and presents your final remarks about the topic. Final remarks can be predictions about the future, advice or a suggestion or further opinions about the topic. Do not continue to discuss in the conclusion (or the introduction).

EXAMPLE:

The material to be used for the conclusion is in the thesis statement. Check the example.

“Food causing obesity should be banned in schools.”

Do you agree/disagree? Thesis statement:

“I firmly believe that food associated with obesity should be banned in educational institutions as students need nutritious food at schools, and schools should not be places promoting unhealthy lifestyle.”

In conclusion, I definitely agree that food causing obesity should not be served at schools. Food at schools should be healthy as young people need nutritious food. Also, schools are places where children learn about lifestyle, and therefore schools should encourage healthy food. In my opinion, the government should take more responsibility, and ensure food safety at schools rather than relying on catering companies.
